HOUSING FOR DEGROWTH by Anitra Nelson and François Schneider (2018)

Housing makes up around one third of the ecological impact of our lifestyle.

To reach sustainable forms of housing or householding we need new ideas and concepts.

Amitra's and François' book offers a wide range of approaches, examples, theoretical explorations, facts and figures. („There are 12 million empty flats in Europe at the moment.“)

Small is necessary. But what does „small“ mean? How ecological is „small“? Are big cities or settlements in the country more conducive to ecological lifestyles?

The authors will be present.
